TMK-®

as we see it

Now, as we enter the new era of color TV, is the time to establish ultra high frequency television as a major factor in the medium. It can be done, simply and easily, by installing at the factory a combination VHF-UHF tuner in every color set produced.

There is room in the frequency spectrum for only about 500 VHF stations, while the spectrum can accommodate about 1700 UHF stations. The public would be served best by the greatest number of stations. More outlets in each area would mean a wider choice of shows for viewers.

As things stand now, it is difficult for a UHF station to make its way in a region served by a couple of VHF stations. In order to receive new UHF stations, the viewer must install a converter in his set, and that entails expense. So far, UHF outlets have been successful chiefly in areas that have no VHF competition.

The Federal Communications Commission has done almost everything in its power to push UHF. It has yet, however, to urge that manufacturers install tuners capable of receiving both VHF and UHF telecasts in all color sets.

A check of major manufacturers shows that only one specifies VHF-UHF tuners for all its color sets. The others either have made no decision yet or are installing them only as ordered by customers.

This is a golden opportunity, perhaps the only opportunity that ever will arise, to put over UHF television. It is evident that color sets gradually will replace monotone receivers over the next few years. If, during the replacement period, provision can also be made for reception of UHF stations, viewers will benefit two-fold.

BEN ALEXANDER, ONE-TIME CHILD ACTOR WHO BECAME—

Friday's Man Friday

BEN ALEXANDER, in little more than a year's time, has become just about the most valuable asset Jack Webb has in the production of Dragnet. As Frank Smith, he plays Webb's sidekick on the show, but it is his least important role in the Dragnet operation. As Ben Alexander, he is the show's anchor to windward. If Webb had a favorite uncle, Alexander would be it.

Alexander originally got into the act through one of those routine little incidents that so often fail to cast any large shadow before them. In the early summer of 1952 he was a highly successful TV showman with a comfortable income which required little or no work to keep it coming. He was happily settled in San Francisco and had absolutely no intention whatsoever of getting back into the acting racket.

Coffee time on Dragnet set: Ben Alexander agreed to four films, never stopped.

The team at work: Ben notes answers while Webb quizzes a suspect (Jeanne Tatum).

Spotted On Quiz Show

But he came down to Los Angeles once a week to emcee and ride herd on a quickie-type quiz show, Watch and Win, whose format he leases to various other stations around the country. Webb happened to see him on the air one night, and the thought passed through his mind, if only fleetingly, that here was a guy who looked and sounded like just the guy he wanted as his permanent sidekick on Dragnet. Barton Yarborough, who had played the role on radio, had died after appearing on only the first two TV versions of the show. Several other actors had been filling in ever since, but none was quite right. Webb was still looking.

Alexander, at the same time, was a Dragnet fan. Without ever having met Webb, he mentioned to someone that he'd like to play a bit part on a Dragnet film. "Just," as he expressed it, "for the heck of it."

Agreed To Four Films

The two men eventually were brought together. Webb talked Alexander into doing four films as Frank Smith. Alexander said that was three more than he'd figured on doing, but he'd do it. Webb, who was now sure he wanted Ben on a permanent basis, settled for the four and made no further issue of the matter.

Alexander chuckles today, "He knew those four would be enough to get the hook into me. I didn't need the money and the last thing in the world I wanted was to go back into business as an actor. So here I am—a perpetual monument to a smart man's come-on."

The psychological factor of Webb's having wanted Alexander has been the key to their relationship ever since. Webb, a hard-driving perfectionist, is not the easiest man in the world for actors to get along with. He has his own ideas and the people who work for him are expected to do things his way.

"Most actors, especially radio actors, don't particularly go for Jack," Alexander says frankly. "They like to criticize his technique as a director, yet they never stop to realize that this technique they don't like has made Dragnet one of the top shows in the country for two years running."

Alexander's position, however, is vastly different. Because Webb has no hold over him, either psychologically or financially, the two men are automatically on the same level, a relationship which quickly developed into a close friendship based on mutual respect and liking. Alexander, the older of the two by some 10 years and far more easy-going, is Webb's stabilizing influence.

He knows how to handle young actors without exposing them to an overdose of Webb's driving intensity. He has taken over a good deal of the liaison work with the Los Angeles Police Department, a vital part of the Dragnet operation. He knows how to come up with the casual suggestion at just the right time. And he was a Rock of Gibraltar for Webb when the star was going through the emotional wringer of his recent divorce from his wife, Julie London.

"Jack," Alexander says, "is not an easy man to understand. Trouble is, most people don't make an effort to understand him. This young guy is the closest thing to a genius Hollywood has seen in years. He has everything it takes to make him one of the finest directors this business has ever had. Only a genius could have gotten me away from San Francisco in the first place."

Ben's love for San Francisco is an acquired one. Born in Nevada, he was brought to Hollywood at the age of three and promptly became a child star in something called "Every Pearl a Tear." He still shudders whenever he hears the title. For the next 11 years he was one of the most active child stars in Hollywood, creating the original "Penrod" series of films and finally quitting only when he became typed in "bad boy" roles. While at Stanford in 1929, he took time off to appear in his last film, "All Quiet on the Western Front," for which he won several awards.

In 1935, Ben got into radio and became a prominent emcee and announcer. After the war, in which he served as a Naval lieutenant aboard an aircraft carrier, he bought up a motel and a couple of filling stations (which are still operated by some of his Navy buddies), dreamed up a couple of money-making if not award-winning TV shows and settled down to live comfortably in San Francisco with his wife, Lesley.

They are now doggedly building a house in the Hollywood hills, their beloved San Francisco apparently lost to them forever. "Dragnet," Ben says with mock bitterness, "has done this terrible thing to us."

Man at the pump: Ben owns filling stations; doesn't depend on Dragnet cash.

Bob Hope Made Her A Star

And Joan Shawlee Hasn't Stopped Working Since

IT ALL started early last year on a Bob Hope show. There was this siren, see? And Hope was the idiot GI with the secret papers. And the gal was a spy, see?

Well, sir, Marilyn Maxwell was originally cast in the part but she took sick four days before airtime. So Hope brings in this girl from left field. Let's try Joan Shawlee, he said, and everybody said oh, no, nice girl and all that but not the type.

So they tried Joan Shawlee because guess who runs the Hope show? And this nice, wholesome-type girl climbed into one of those slinky black things and the morning after the show everybody along Vine Street was asking everybody else who was that girl on the Hope show last night and Joan Shawlee was in. Couple of days later her smart press agent took out full page ads in the trade papers, featuring this same slinky black job and saying thanks to Hope for giving her such a break. That did it for fair. The kid hasn't stopped working since.

(Kid? She's 26, is married and has a four-year-old son.)

With Shawlee, it's a hobby. With pay. If Hollywood had an Extroverts Club, she would be its president. She is all extrovert, including her measurements. She stands 5'7" and weighs 130 heroically proportioned pounds.

What has she got that 679 other girls in Hollywood haven't got?

Thrives On Versatility

"Versatility," she said. "Shucks, I've been at this racket since I was 14. I've studied, boy. I even studied ballet for six solid months but I couldn't stand the bleeding feet. I studied everything—acting, singing, diction, psychology."

She isn't kidding about that psychology bit. She has a wonderfully disarming way of putting herself on the producer's level, treating him like an old friend and making him like it.

Movie fans with a memory may recall a young thing out of Universal some six or seven years back by name of Joan Fulton. That was Shawlee. She spent most of her time in the publicity department posing for cheesecake pictures but she did manage to appear in a couple of Abbott and Costello pictures.

Signed For TV Film

Then she met a Los Angeles printing executive named Walter Shawlee, married him and forgot her career for four years to start bringing up Walter, Jr. A year ago Abbott and Costello suddenly thought of her and asked her to do a couple of their TV films with them. Why not, she figured. Then Martin and Lewis saw her in one of the films and used her as Jerry's mother in one of his Lord Fauntleroy sketches. Hope saw that one and used her in the spy sketch.

Since then she's appeared on more than 20 TV shows, both live and film, playing everything from comedy to serious drama; and six movies, including "From Here to Eternity," "Conquest of Space" and "Casanova's Big Night" with Bob Hope.

She and her husband live in Westchester, a suburb hard by the Los Angeles International Airport. She drives a brand new Hillman Minx with more exuberance than skill, plays a big game of tennis and is currently enjoying prestige as the Sheriff of Westchester. The mayor is Esther Williams. "I'm just as big as she is," Shawlee complains cheerfully, "but she swims better. So she's the mayor. Anyway, the publicity is wonderful. A smart sheriff can make the papers every day if he puts his mind to it."

So can a smart actress. Like Joan.

She clowns as well: Martin and Lewis used Joan in this Comedy Hour sketch.

A beauty and—Spike Jones and Freddy Morgan. She's Helen Grayco, Spike's wife.

Bedlam Comes To Television

Whatever's the matter with Spike, you can bet these zanies will make it worse.

MATERIAL? SPIKE JONES HAS A WHOLE WAREHOUSE FULL

FORTUNATELY for Hollywood's reputation in the hinterlands, there is at least one genuine character in town. His name is Spike Jones, a man who credits his success on TV to oatmeal.

"Some of our best arrangements," he says, with a magnificently straight face, "come from the way I gulp down my oatmeal in the morning."

A working alumnus of the zany never-never land of the traveling musician, Jones' conversation is sprinkled with odd bits and snatches that somehow never sound quite real but which to him seem perfectly clear.

"So we took a chorus on dishes," he muses, "and I am probably the only man who ever discovered a musician down a manhole. He was playing a pneumatic drill. Best pneumatic drill player in the country."

Life wasn't always so beautifully uncomplicated for Jones and his madhouse crew of City Slickers. There was a time, some 11 years ago, when the poor guys had to play it straight. "The idea for the Slickers," he explains, as nearly as he can explain anything, "evolved from the musical fluff. These guys out front were always getting laughs by muffing their lines and ad libbing their way back so I figured you could just as easily goof with an instrument and get the same laugh. We now goof on cue."

Actually, it takes a far better-than-average sideman to play the Jones brand of music and the City Slickers today quite probably constitute one of the finest groups of pure musicians extant. "No fun just playing music, though," Jones says. "More fun this way. More noise, too."

Two For The Road

For television, Jones has had to cut his operation down considerably. On the road, it takes two railroad baggage cars just to handle all the props and costumes. For one-night stands, where the baggage cars would be an economic millstone, Jones has bought a 32-foot trailer. "Doesn't hold an awful lot," he says, "but it'll have to do. Heck, we got a warehouse over there on Melrose that's busting out at the sides. So darned full of gimmicks we can't find anything in it anymore."

Television is an entirely different proposition, Jones has discovered. "Have to boil the act down," he says. "I try to give it a story line, maybe concentrating on a single sketch or a couple of single bits. Our funniest bit, Freddy Morgan's pantomime on the 'Poet and Peasant Overture,' we have coming up in a picture so I'll have to hold it a while.

"I don't think we'll ever run out of material," Jones adds. "We still have lots of our regular act we haven't touched, and most of our TV shows have actually been originals. After all, how many other shows can get music out of an inner tube? We can't either, but it's a good try and lasts three minutes on the screen."

Jones is a little man as Hollywood stars go, slight of build and with incredibly small hands. He is a master of the dead pan as well as of the ad lib and is an exceptionally friendly person who seems to take a continuing interest in what the other fellow is saying or doing. This, it should be added, is an extremely rare quality among Hollywood's starrier citizens.

Married to singer Helen Grayco, for whose talents he expresses open-faced admiration, and to whom he refers as "that wonderful Italian I married," Jones lives in Beverly Hills, has two young children and is currently on a hi-fi kick. "If you think TV or a good book can keep you up late nights," he marvels, "just wait until you get a hi-fi outfit. I sit there for hours just listening to a bass drum. Boom, boom. In hi-fi. All over the room. Crazy."

Helen, as 'Snow White', serves 'Dwarfs'.

An actor only during working hours

TONY RANDALL, IN REAL LIFE, IS LIKE PEEPERS' PAL, WES

VAGUELY athletic, good-natured Wes (Harvey Weskit) of Mr. Peepers is, in person, vaguely athletic, good-natured Tony Randall. This is in keeping with the placid personalities of most other Peepers' regulars—Wally Cox, Marion Lorne and Pat Benoit—and is in line with Tony's own idea of what an actor should be like—"un-actor-ish." As a point of pride, he says affably, "I don't look like an actor, I don't dress like one and I've never even been to Sardi's."

No actor-type he: Tony with Georgiann Johnson, his TV 'wife.'

Since Sardi's is the place where most actors come to be seen by other actors, his point is well made. As the son of an Eastern art dealer who went West to make a killing in oil, Tony inherited intellectualism and Midwesternism. His New Yorkerisms are adopted.

Now in his late 20's, Tony is married to the former Florence Gibbs, an ex-undergraduate at Northwestern University, where he started training professionally. For awhile Tony got sidetracked from the acting career he decided on at the age of 13 back in Tulsa, Oklahoma — sidetracked first via the Army, then via soap opera. For years he earned his living playing in such American epics as "Portia Faces Life" and "My True Story" (both radio) and both the "direct antithesis of what I admire most." This last includes Shaw, Italian opera and American repertory theater.

Before the Army, the young Tony had made his New York debut and had played with Jane Cowl in "Candida." "For a time I did only dramatic shows and no one thought I could play anything but that. So I convinced people I would make a good Englishman (Katherine Cornell's 'The Barretts of Wimpole Street') and I was labelled English. Then I became the 'neurotic type.' Now, I'm a comedian. And it's impossible to convince anyone I have the depth to play a serious role."

Tony took time out from comedy last year to direct "Down in the Valley," for the American Lyric Theater.

BEHIND-SCENES AT THE ARMY McCARTHY HEARINGS

WASHINGTON — Coverage of the Senator Joe McCarthy vs. the Army Hearings marks another milestone of public service by the television networks. The job is costing them more than $1,000,000 in cancelled commercial programs and actual expenses. By far the biggest expense is borne by NBC...

Estimated audience before television screens for this show is much more than 30,000,000 daily. What gives these hearings a larger audience than saw the Kefauver crime sessions is the fact that there are now nearly 300 more television stations operating, and millions of more sets in the homes . . .

The Senate Committee made a deep bow to television in its preparations. Normally, in a controversial hearing, opposing factions would be placed at opposite ends of the long committee table. If you watched this one, you noticed that Senator McCarthy and his top aides, and Secretary of the Army Robert T. Stevens and his assistants sat right next to each other . . . this was to make it easier for the television cameras to cover them both.

The first day, the McCarthy team sat at the end of the table with the Army team at right angles to them, near the end. Thereafter they exchanged positions daily. Reason was to give each group an equal chance at full-face and profile views for the cameras.

Senator Karl Mundt, acting chairman of the Investigating Committee, was responsible for a new "first". He permitted erection of a three-tiered platform along one wall for the newsreel cameras. Five of these 10 cameras have been working for television. Although CBS has one of the newsreel cameras, Edward R. Murrow had another one there exclusively to make shots for his own shows.

If you noticed people perspiring, the heat came from the big, hot lights illuminating the scene for the newsreel cameras. TV is not that harsh.

Reports are strong that Ray H. Jenkins' Tennessee Republican who is chief counsel for the Investigating Committee, plans to use the hearings and the opportunity to reach millions via TV as a springboard to launch a campaign for the U. S. Senate . . . this would create a most unusual situation. His opponent would be Senator Estes Kefauver, running for reelection in Tennessee. Kefauver made a national reputation and nearly won the Democratic presidential nomination, thanks to his televised crime hearings.

No Rain for Rayner

RAY'S FUTURE LOOKS SUNNY

THE May flowers and Ray Rayner arrived in Chicago just about the same time last year. Both received an enthusiastic welcome. To Ray's credit, he'll be around here to greet the buds again this year—and what's more, figures to stay long enough to celebrate many more May Days in this area.

When he first joined WBBM-TV last year, he rated his own early morning stint, the Rayner Shine Show (8 AM, Mon. through Fri.). It was recently axed in favor of CBS' new Morning Show. But he still conducts the station's Saturday teen-age jive jamboree, the Ray Rayner Show (12:30 PM), in addition to daily announcing duties on Channel 2. Just recently, Ray was instrumental in WBBM-TV's winning TV GUIDE's award for 1953's outstanding special events show. This, by virtue of the stellar performance he turned in last spring announcing the dramatic suicide attempt from the Tribune Tower.

Strictly speaking, this line of reporting is not up Rayner's alley. He's considerably more at home in his easygoing emcee roles where he can indulge his love for pantomiming and corny jokes.

On his Saturday opus for teenagers, records comprise the bulk of entertainment. Here he shares his pantomiming duties with Mina Kolb, a charming miss in Chicago television.

Announcing, emcee chores and pantomiming are no challenge to the lanky Scotsman. He's steeped in theater experience from way back. In addition to college productions at Fordham University and community theater work, Ray also was employed by radio stations in Dayton, Ohio, and Long Island, N. Y., before taking on the Grand Rapids post.

But it was during the war that he received a hefty chunk of all-around experience. Shot down over Germany while serving as navigator on a B-17, he was thrown into a prisoner of war camp for two years. For entertainment, the POW's formed a dramatic group and obtained scripts like The Philadelphia Story and Our Town from the Red Cross. Ray was drafted as actor, director, scene designer and prop man for these productions.

Four years after the war ended, he married a former nurse. The couple now has two children, Mark and Christiana, and live in suburban Evanston. Looks like the happy end to Ray's story. Or is it just the beginning? There's no telling where this boy will go.

ON THE EDUCATIONAL TV FRONT

Citation for Ryerson

Edward L. Ryerson received a citation from the Chicago Film Council for his work toward the establishment of WTTW, Chicago's educational TV station on Channel 11. The citation praised Ryerson for his "valuable contribution to attain new heights in the realm of education by television."

Ryerson is president of the Chicago Television Association, the non-profit corporation sponsoring WTTW.

Plan WTTW Show

From These Four Corners, a series of programs on countries in the news, is being planned by De Paul University for WTTW, Chicago's educational TV station.

Programs will acquaint the viewer with the geography of the country, stressing the culture and folk lore to provide an understanding of the headlines concerning that country. Dr. Richard Houk of the geography department will serve as moderator of each show.

TV Teletype*

NEW YORK Bob Stahl reports:

Godfrey and Friends will be off the air during July and August, marking the first summer since the show's inception that it will vacation. The replacement has not been set. The morning Arthur Godfrey Time will continue through the summer, with the "friends" rotating vacations, and guest emcees substituting for GODFREY.

Looks like virtually every telefilm series will use repeats of best shows this summer when the stars vacation. Even I Love Lucy, which was replaced last year by Racket Squad, will utilize re-runs this summer . . . Ford Theater re-runs will replace not only Ford Theater but also Circle Theater--under a different title, of course.

WALLY COX will join the crowded ranks of TV comedy husbands in mid-May. He'll be married on the Mr. Peepers program (but not in real life) to PAT BENOIT . . . STEVE ALLEN signed to do 15 of the 30 Your Show of Shows programs next season. Under producer-director MAX LIEBMAN's new format, STEVE will be more than just a program host--he'll participate in sketches, do musical numbers, etc.

JANE WYMAN will be the next movie star to go TV. She's signed to do a telefilm series from Hollywood starting in the fall . . . PAT CARROLL, who was RED BUTTONS' TV girl-friend, and the SAUTER-FINNEGAN orchestra added to the line-up of regular performers on this summer's Saturday Night Review . . . BUTTONS' TV girl-friend this year, BETTY ANN GROVE, may team with JOHNNY DESMOND to replace JANE FROMAN for the summer.

Despite TALLULAH's objections, the GOODSON-TODMAN office is cooking up a new show for her, to be titled The World of Tallulah Bankhead. It's slated for a fall premiere, with ABC getting first crack at it . . . WALTER O'KEEFE again fills in when HERB SHRINER vacations from his Two for the Money this summer.

FRANKIE LAINE enters the TV sweepstakes next fall with a new telefilm musical series to be produced by Guild Films, the outfit that now produces the LIBERACE Show, Life with Elizabeth and Joe Palooka . . . SAMUEL GOLDWYN interested in making a movie of "The Last Notch," super-Western recently televised on U.S. Steel Hour.

Starting this week, the three regular stars on Four-Star Playhouse will be portraying the same character on each program he does. DICK POWELL will stick to his characterization of Dante, the gambler; CHARLES BOYER will concentrate on Dr. Pygmalion; DAVID NIVEN will play a character not yet selected.

Dan Jenkins reports:

FRANK CAPRA, after one year and $250,000, has completed the pilot film, Our Mr. Sun, for AT&T's proposed new hour-long science series . . . Truth or Consequences starts on NBC May 18, replacing FRED ALLEN . . . NBC is putting $2,000,000 into a new color studio to be built at the network's Burbank plant here. Studio will be ready by the end of this year.

The Dragnet feature picture, now in production at Warners, is loaded with radio actors . . . Halls of Ivy, starring the RONALD COLMANS, is budgeted at $50,000 per film, making it one of the most expensive half-hour shows yet . . . The Comedy Hour, already renewed for next year, will alternate between comedy and musical comedies, latter to be done out of New York. EDDIE CANTOR and DONALD O'CONNOR leave the show, with DURANTE, MARTIN & LEWIS and ABBOTT & COSTELLO thus far set to return.

Sign of the times: actress PAT CROWLEY appeared on more than 50 TV shows before finally making her debut on radio . . . IMOGENE COCA's dilemma: whether to do eight or 10 live one-shots for NBC out of N. Y. next season or 39 half-hour Midge films out of Hollywood. On a long range basis, the Midge series is by far the better deal for her . . . Former Notre Dame coach FRANK LEAHY will do a weekly quarter-hour sports film for ABC-TV in the fall.

The new Lassie film series goes into full production May 17 . . . EVE ARDEN, who already has adopted three children, is having one of her own come September . . . That hour-long CBS Saturday afternoon wrestling "show" is being dropped as of May 1--nobody wants to buy it . . . As predicted here some time ago, DICK POWELL will be head of production for RKO. TV can lead a man anywhere.

WALT DISNEY's 26 hour-long shows for ABC next season will be made up of four different series: Frontierland, World of Tomorrow, True Life Adventures and Fantasyland. For the remaining 26 weeks of the year ABC will offer 13 This Is the U. S. films, with JOHN DALY, and a 13-week summer show not yet picked . . . NANETTE FABRAY will headline five of MAX LIEBMAN's new Your Show of Shows.

HOW TV AFFECTED LUCY and DESI

Second Of Two Articles

SO FAR as the public is concerned, Desi Arnaz is a lighthearted, slightly screwy Cuban comedian who stars with his wife, Lucille Ball, in a Monday night special called I Love Lucy.

What the public has yet to realize, however, is that Desi Arnaz is president of Desilu Productions, an outfit currently producing no less than five TV films per week and producing them with a quality that rates a capital "Q." It always comes as a distinct shock to someone who doesn't already know it that this company produces not only I Love Lucy but Our Miss Brooks and three other top-rated shows as well. Desilu turns out more footage than MGM.

Senor Arnaz, the comedian, is all of a sudden one of the most successful young businessmen in Hollywood.

Company Four Years Old

Contrary even to general Hollywood belief, Desilu Productions came into being back in the days, four years ago, when Lucy was just another girl's name instead of a national institution. It was set up then as a corporate entity to handle Desi's band "and any other activities which might evolve in the future." That the "other activities" would include, in so short a period of time, the ranking No. 1 TV show in the Nation is something not even the most flattering astrologers would have predicted at the time.

How, it might be asked, does this Arnaz man manage to co-star in a weekly TV show and still run a big and growing business?

Minutes Mean Money

Actually, it's not so difficult as one might think. Desi's small but tasteful office at Motion Picture Center is located not 50 feet from the I Love Lucy soundstage. And a careful scrutiny of the show reveals that quite a lot of footage doesn't include Desi. The hard-to-rehearse shenanigans generally fall upon Lucy and Vivian Vance, who plays "Ethel Mertz."

"They'll wait for me for about 10 minutes," Desi says, "and then the director, Bill Asher, will come over and stick his head in the office door and say, 'I hope you're making some money in here because you're sure losing it out on the set.'"

The metamorphosis of Desi Arnaz from lighthearted bandleader to serious-minded businessman is one of the Eight Wonders of Hollywood. At 33, he was just another Hollywood name, a successful bandleader and not much else. Today, at 37, he is one of the powers of the television industry. At 33 he was being deferential to a routine radio director. At 37 he meets on equal terms with William Paley, chairman of the board at CBS. At 33, he looked upon a sponsor as something he was lucky to have. At 37, it is pretty much the other way around.

How's business? Lucille will be pleased.

Desi's native intelligence began to assert itself shortly after I Love Lucy got under way. When he started looking for his key man who could carry the bulk of the load, he instinctively went to the one man at CBS who, in the long negotiations for the original I Love Lucy deal, had given him the most trouble. "It figured," Desi says simply. "There was this one guy who kept costing me money and saving it for CBS. I figured I had better get him on my side where he could start saving me money for a change." So Martin Leeds, formerly in charge of business affairs for CBS in Hollywood, is now executive vice-president of Desilu Productions.

The Arnaz - Leeds combination clicked from the beginning. Each trusts the other implicitly and each has enormous respect for the other's talents. "He," Leeds says of Desi, "is a very bright man with a fabulous memory and a knack for understanding what he's learned. He's learned plenty, too. I can spend a couple of days working on a cost sheet, and he'll read and understand it in one minute flat. Six months later, if the cost of something has gone up, he'll quote that first cost sheet and will want to know what happened. He doesn't miss a thing."

Desi has attained a stature, both professionally and personally, that no one else knew he had in him. A more attractive man than he appears on the screen (a little gray in the hair and a few lines in the face make a world of difference), he carries himself with an air of easy confidence. He has learned how to meet and talk with people, how to put them at their ease and how to make them, in the end, come around to his way of thinking. He can charm the needles right off a pine tree when he puts his mind to it.

He can also blow his Cuban top, go into a tired blue funk or break up in tears. All the success in the world can't change the fact that he is an emotional Latin.

The tears come when he is angry or upset—or whenever he hears a tragic story about a child. He is a pushover for children, especially his own. The basic idea behind Desilu Productions, in fact, was to provide a growing trust fund for Lucie Desiree and Desiderio Alberto Arnaz IV.

At home, Desi is in turn a carpenter, a reader, a film cutter, an amateur photographer, a cook and a sports fan. The Wednesday night TV fights are a must in their San Fernando Valley home, as are the Friday night fights when they are in Palm Springs. Weekends he plays golf, which he has just recently taken up, and odds are that he will eventually sell his widely publicized cabin cruiser, the Desilu, and devote more and more time to golf and skeet shooting.

Senor Abraham Lincoln

He also has recently discovered Abraham Lincoln. "He used to read nothing but Mickey Spillane," an associate comments. "Now he's got every book on Lincoln he can find. Furthermore, he's reading them."

Desi is determined to make Desilu Productions the best TV film company in Hollywood. To be "the best" is important to him. He and Lucy both know only too well that with the show now on top, there is only one direction left for it to take.

CBS recently tried to buy into Desilu, to take it over as the network's film production arm. But Desi decided against it. He and Leeds are still young, still ambitious, still excited about the tremendous potentials ahead. They'll run the shop.

No time wasted: during their vacation, Lucy and Desi made the 'Trailer' film.

How to Score a TV Fight

By Chris Schenkel

Du Mont Sports Commentator

WITHIN the last few years, boxing has ventured from smoke-clogged neighborhood fight clubs into the living rooms of millions of people. The majority of these new fans have never seen prize fighting in the flesh, and are confused by its fast pace and its bewildering assortment of punches and tactics. But millions of these new enthusiasts want to understand all of the fighter's movements and punches, and to keep score like the referee and judges. The following tips will help to score a fight on a par with an official at ringside.

The National Boxing Association uses the "10-point-must" system. The winner of the round gets 10 points; the loser 9, 8, 7 or so on, depending on his showing. New York State uses its own system and, since many bouts originate there, this fact should be kept in mind.

New York State officials score a winner of each round, or tally it even (E). In addition, one to four points are credited to the winner of each round. If a boxer wins by a shade he gets one point; by a clear margin, two points; by a wide margin, three points, and by a one-sided margin plus a knockdown, four points. However, points count only if boxers are tied on rounds at the end of the contest. In awarding these points, judges are required by the New York State Boxing Commission to look for clean hitting, ring generalship, effective aggressiveness and defensive skill.

Some of the best punches do not appear especially telling. Short, swift uppercuts, and blows landed during in-fighting are often more effective than they appear. Conversely, some of the most dramatic appearing punches, like Kid Gavilan's famous bolo, do not have much force behind them.

Effective hitting is characterized by a number of basic punches: jabs, hooks, right crosses and combinations.

A jab is a short, straight punch. The left jab is an opening wedge in a fighter's offense. An efficient jabbing attack will keep an antagonist away and off balance, and many bouts are won by effective use of this offense.

A hook is any punch other than a straight blow. It comes around, under, or above a foe's guard, and is often used to stun an opponent.

A combination is a sequence or volley of blows. It is the ability to put together a combination that marks the difference between a novice and a champion. The most famous and common combination is "the old one-two" —a left and a right.

A fighter is paid to fight, and an aggressive boxer is trying his best by wading in and slugging. Most of the best fighters always carry the initiative to their opponent, adhering to the tried but still true adage of "getting there fustest with the mostest."

If a fighter is to win, he must avoid catching that all-important blow "with his name written on it." Look for effective clinching when hurt. Observe these defensive techniques of the master boxer: blocking and slipping punches, ducking, parrying, picking off blows with arms, elbows or gloves, while remaining in position to punch.

Major fouls may result in disqualifying the offending boxer, but fighters are much more apt, by intent or accident, to commit a minor foul. Minor fouls, when detected, result in a warning, or lost round, on the part of the offender. Such offenses include holding, backhand blows, low punching, kidney and rabbit punches, spinning, and hitting on the break.

Remember, it's a difference of opinion that makes matches. Some of the best and hardest-fought bouts end in split-decisions. Just as trained judges often view the same fight differently, so do you at home. The opinion of an experienced TV viewer, while it does not determine the winner, can be as valid as the professional judge's.

Illegal Punches (Right)
Graziano again demonstrates: 7. Rabbit Punch, blow on neck; 8. Hitting on the Break; 9. Kidney Punch, and 10. Gouging. Referee in No. 8 is Whitey Bimstein.

PROGRAM OF THE WEEK

My Friend Irma

CBS' My Friend Irma is one of several programs that helped that network establish its beachhead in TV situation comedy. Now that the beachhead has been secured, it might be well to go on to better things. With Marie Wilson in the title role, the show has its quota of laughs. But it will never be remembered as one of TV's finer accomplishments.

Irma's chief fault lies in its basic premise, which is strictly phony. The primary situation of any TV comedy should be honest enough to sustain even the most ridiculous slapstick. But Irma emerges as so stupid a doll, it's almost impossible to accept the situations built around her. Granted that the show strives for nothing higher than farce, it seems incredible that any boss would put up with a secretary like Irma for a week.

'The Body' Has Brains, Too

Miss Wilson, whose own brain-power is said to be distinctly unlike that of the beautiful-but-dumb blonde she portrays, has been playing the same role since she first broke into movies and radio and is now complete mistress of the part. Mary Shipp took over last fall as Kay Foster, Irma's bemused roommate.

The writers this year have injected some long-overdue new characters. They've given Irma a 10-year-old nephew to take care of, and more recently they've revived her ex-boyfriend to vie for her hand with this year's model. Sid Tomack and Hal March, as the boyfriends, provide a much-needed lift. John Carradine, who once played Hamlet, has wandered in and out of the program in recent weeks as an errant neighbor.

Next to Miss Wilson, the best assignment belongs to Donald MacBride, as Irma's boss. A master of the slow burn, he almost makes his role believable.

Life With Elizabeth

BETTY WHITE and her Life with Elizabeth are bringing new meaning to that belabored term, "situation comedy." Unlike so many other programs that bear the label but are really slapstick, Elizabeth builds its humor strictly on situations. The show is so good that higher-budgeted, better-publicized shows should study it.

Betty, who also has her own daytime show on NBC, might well become the first TV-style "America's Sweetheart." A winsome gal (oh, those dimples!), she's not the glamor-puss type you'd expect to see in a swank night club, but the girl next door—cute but not cloying, sensible but not too smart.

Elizabeth, a telefilm series, is probably unique in that each half-hour program includes three separate episodes. Betty and Del Moore portray an average young married couple, and the situations they become involved in could happen to anybody. Their fine under-playing gives the situations real charm and realism. Uneven film quality, however, is a definite drawback.—R. S.

FINE TUNING

By OLLIE CRAWFORD

FIRST color TV sets turn up in barrooms. Now they can show full color to full customers.

Every time TV comes out with something new, they have to oil up the swinging doors.

Black-and-white TV got its start in the bar. That was when papa used to get his schnapps along with Hopalong. He thought there were only two kinds of television—by the glass and by the bottle.

Pop used to go to the corner tavern each evening to watch the fights, instead of being in them at home.

Now color TV is as good an excuse to get out of the house as any. Pop insists he wants to go down to Grogan's Bar to see Ding Dong School in full color. He hasn't seen so many strange and wonderful colors since the last time Mom dyed her hair.

One guy now spends a lot of time at the bar. He says the color is compatible, and his wife ain't.

You can always tell when this boy has been watching the bar's color TV. His nose turns red.

REGIONAL RECIPES:

in New York, it's

Barbecued Spareribs

Josephine McCarthy: the camera crew stampedes for her barbecued spareribs.

COOKING fine dishes—whether in the privacy of the home or the somewhat hectic conditions of a television studio—is challenging and rewarding, reports Josephine McCarthy, who conducts a daily cooking show on Station WNBT in New York. The lady of the house gets a lift from her family's good health and praise. In the studio, Josie's reward is fan mail and the thrill of the manly applause from "on the spot" samplers (i. e., camera and engineering crews, and the dozen or more guides and other station personnel who flock to the set for Josie's daily menus).

Of the many and varied dishes created over years of TV cooking, Miss McCarthy says the most furious stampede was for barbecued spareribs. It is difficult to pin down typical dishes of this area, since cosmopolitan New Yorkers have borrowed regional and foreign favorites "for keeps." Taking a chance, however, she did claim that "our favorite dishes lie in the realm of meats." So, as the top of many favorites, here is:

Barbecued Spareribs

The ingredients consist of 2½-3 lbs. spareribs; ¼ c. vinegar; 2 T. honey; 4 T. soy souce; ¼ cup chili souce; 1 t. salt and papriko each; 1 clove garlic (crushed); 2 T. salad oil and few drops Tabosco sauce.

Trim excess fat from ribs. Mix together remoining ingredients and spreod over entire meat surfaces. Refrigerate for ½ to 1 hour. Place ribs, curved side up, on rack in pre-heated broiler ot leost 8 inches from low flome. Broil 25-30 minutes or until crusty. Turn and broil until crusty on under side brushing occasionally with left over souce. The recipe serves four.

TV's Biggest Mystery

TEXAS STATION SIGNAL SEEN IN ENGLAND—THREE YEARS AFTER IT WENT OFF THE AIR!

Call letters, as seen in England.

IS THERE an intelligence somewhere in outer space which is beaming TV signals at the earth?

Or can television signals from Texas wander around the ionosphere for more than three years and then be picked up in England?

These are two of the questions with which engineers are wrestling in Houston, Tex., and in Britain as they delve into the mystery of KLEE-TV.

And these are the facts.

1. At 3:30 P.M., British Summer Time, September 14, 1953, Charles W. Bratley, of London, picked up the call letters KLEE-TV on his television set. Later that month, and several times since, they have been seen by engineers at Atlantic Electronics, Ltd., Lancaster, England.

2. The call letters KLEE-TV have not been transmitted since July, 1950, when the Houston station changed its letters to KPRC-TV.

3. A check of the world's television stations confirms the fact that there is not now and never has been another KLEE-TV.

Paul Huhndorff, chief engineer of KPRC-TV, to whom the Britishers sent their report, has no explanation. He contends it is not unusual for signals to be received hundreds or even thousands of miles from the transmitter. KPRC-TV (and the old KLEE-TV) has been picked up at Halifax, Nova Scotia, 2000 miles away.

Such freak reception occurs when signals shoot off into space, strike an atmospheric layer known as the ionosphere, and rebound to earth. However, the reception of such pictures has been as nearly instantaneous as electronics permit. A time lapse of 30 seconds would be a cause for wonder.

Members of the old KLEE-TV staff have identified the pictures of the signals as looking like the standard call-letter slide they used.

Engineer Huhndorff, waiting for more information from England, reserves final opinion. Meanwhile, he offers three theories.

1. The whole business is a hoax perpetrated by some amateur TV operator. This he discounts on the grounds of his fellow engineers' integrity.

2. The signals may have rebounded from a celestial object, a light year and a half away. This would be a mathematical miracle if it happened once. Several times is just too fantastic for belief.

3. Some intelligence in outer space has received the signal and has retransmitted it in the hope of communicating with this planet.

Those are the theories. We suggest the readers take their pick or invent their own.
